Iced tea in hand, Sam Cooke on the hifi, the Rocker Two tall is deeply rooted in Southern American porch culture. While its heritage might be southern, the Rocker Two finds elegance in its lengthy back and slender lines. It plays with a traditional archetype; the rocker you might remember your grandmother rocking in, elevating it with an exposed, oversized bottom curve and slim vertical lines.

Drawing inspiration from a traditional Danish weaving process, with our Rocker Two it is wood not thread that creates the seamless, interwoven engagement. The back rest and seating plane, both made out of thin oak strip wood, pass through each other, allowing light to pass through and soften the Rocker's nature.
